LABORATORY SAFETY INSPECTION

In the United States, daily close to 1 million people work in a laboratory environment. Employees are exposed to hazards that could affect their health. ACT Safe, LLC personnel perform laboratory safety inspections that follow OSHA 29 CFR 1910.1450 and all other 29 CFR applicable standards, National Institute of Health (NIH), Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC), National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH), Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), American Industrial Hygiene Association (AIHA), National Fire Protection Association (NFPA), National Electric Code (NEC) and the client's internal policies.

Our in-depth inspect review all exposure that pose a hazard to health and safety of the employee. Focused areas:

- Engineering Controls - Changes to the work environment to reduce hazards examples include: chemical fume / ventilation hoods, showers, eye washers, and Biological Safety cabinets.
- Administrative Controls- those that modify work schedules and tasks examples include: Chemical hygiene plan and Standard Operating procedures (example: Spill Plan, Emergency Response, OSHA HazCom & PPE program, Inventory Control plan, etc.)
- Work Practices-Procedures for safe and proper work. Proper techniques used by workers (example: no mouth pipetting,).
- Personal Protective Equipment- Protective Gear examples: respirators, face shields, goggles, disposable gloves, etc.
- Chemical review (speciation) / Industrial Hygiene monitoring – review / perform to assure that laboratory employees' exposures to such substances do not exceed the permissible exposure limits specified in 29 CFR part 1910, subpart Z.

WORKPLACE EXPOSURE ASSESSMENT

The Workplace Exposure Assessment is the multi-disciplinary field that identifies and characterizes workplace exposures, develops estimates of exposure for exposure-response and risk assessment studies, and evaluates the significance of exposure and effectiveness of intervention strategies.

Throughout this assessment the following Occupational exposure will be performed:

- Identification,
- Characterization,
- Estimation, and
- Evaluation of workplace hazards.

At each stage, ACT Safe, LLC considers the available information and develop a course of action that may include continuing along the original exposure assessment process, determining that no further action is required, performing additional hazard identification, refining the exposure assessment, or improving or adding engineering and/or administrative controls.
